

UCLA

Student Learning Outcomes for the B.A. in Theater

The Theater major is a designated capstone major. Capstone courses vary by area and require individual projects or performances, a major artistic contribution to a theater production, or an individual course of study resulting in a research paper. Students across areas should be able to:

- demonstrate broad-based knowledge of fundamentals through coursework, including general knowledge as well as specialized skills.
- successfully relate their experience in a studio, production or fieldwork setting.
- communicate effectively, both orally and in writing.
- engage with a community of artists and scholars presenting theatrical work.